Discussion Grows Heated. One of the features of the afternoon session was rather a heated discussion over the appointment of a committee on resolutions. It was suggested that the committee consist of one representative of every State in the Union. Delegates from the several trade and commercial organizations immediately entered a protest against such action on the part of the convention, setting forth the claim that if such delegates should be appointed, their respective organizations would not be properly represented on the committee. The discussion continued until there were a dozen delegates on their feet clamoring for the floor. The matter was finally set tled by an agreement that the chairman be allowed to appoint a committee of fif-teen at large, the members of the committee to represent the various interests that have delegates in the convention.

About 400 delegates were in attendance at the opening session. E. S. A. de Lima,
